She had seen a lot of blood in all three...not necessary, for all he saw was a mass of confusing colors. "Nobody," he said...a fascinating article (in response to some critical letters) which tells why critics are such snobs. There was only one incident: a wealthy merchant came around in a big pink palanquin, got out and said, "Look at it, Matt. Really look at it." So he did, feeling foolish, wondering what the joke was. He noticed a white patch near the top of the largest globe. It was streaked, like a glass marble with swirls of opaque material. He hit it. It looked very familiar, he realized, with the hair on the back of his neck starting to stand up...with a hat of paper feathers and polyhedrons. The band of the hat said, "I'm a Partyland Smarty-pants." It isn't the realists who find life dreadful. It's the romancers. After all, which group is trying to escape from life? Reality is horrible and wonderful, disappointing and ecstatic, beautiful and ugly. Reality is everything. Reality is what there is. Only the hopelessly insensitive find reality so pleasant as to never want to get away from it. But pain-killers can be bad for the health, and even if they were not, I am damned if anyone will make me say that the newest fad in analgesics is equivalent to the illumination, which is the other thing (besides pleasure) art ought to provide. Bravery, nobility, sublimity, and beauty that have no connection with the real world are simply fake, and once readers realize that escape does not work, the glamor fades, the sublime aristocrats turn silly, the profundities become simplifications, and one enters (if one is lucky) into the dreadful discipline of reality and art, like "In the Penal Colony." But George Bernard Shaw said all this almost a century ago; interested readers may look up his preface to Arms and the Man or that little book. Miss Tremaine looked up from her typing at the rattle and frowned. Her desk was out in the small reception area, but I had arranged both desks so we could see each other and talk in normal voices when the door was open. It stayed open most of the time except when I had a client who felt secretaries shouldn't know his troubles. She had been transcribing the Lucas McGowan report for half an hour, humming and tsk-tsking at thirty-second intervals. She was having a marvelous time. Miss Tremaine was about forty-five, looked like a constipated librarian, and was the best secretary I'd ever had. She'd been with me seven years. I'd tried a few young and sexy ones, but it hadn't worked out. Either they wouldn't play at all, or they wanted to play all the time. When he was sure the others were asleep, Crawford opened his eyes and looked around the darkened barracks. When asked how I knew what was coming, by friends who enjoyed such an odd talent (and some do), I could explain only part of the time. The cues people respond to in fiction or drama are complex and people are not always fully conscious of them. Together they started through the marsh and muck. "You know," said Amos, stopping once to look at a grey spider web that spread. After what seemed a long, long time, he saw a flicker of silver-white, and coming closer, he saw it was a unicorn. It stood in the little clearing, blinking. Just behind the unicorn was the last piece of the mirror. her hand. "Selene," I called. "I can't reach her.
