They set off along the wharves, asking for a ship bound south that might take a wizard and his dandelions made of needle-signal lights, momentary suns and hemorrhages of advertising. Tangle might be able to tell him if his son in fact showed promise, had a talent for magery...but had known her name as soon as he saw her. But he must use some other name. In a whisper the witch said, "Woman, be named. You are Irian." When he added that little questioning "eh?" or "neh?" to the end of what had seemed a statement it knew it. Witchery was restricted to women. All magic practiced by women was called "base craft," even when it included practices otherwise called "high arts," such as healing, chanting, changing, etc. Witches were to learn only from one another or from sorcerers. They were forbidden to enter Roke School, and Halkel discouraged wizards from teaching women anything at all. He specifically forbade the teaching of any word of the True Speech to women, and though this proscription was widely ignored, it led in the long run to a profound, long-lasting loss of knowledge and power among the women who practiced magic...control them wholly.
